Peters Eight-Hour Bill for Women Goes to House Without Amendment.

The Peters eight-hour bill for women employed in the District of Columbia was today ordered favorably reported to the House by the House committee or labor. The bill will be reported withou amendment.

This measure was strongly opposed by Washington merchants and business men at hearings before the House committee during the last few weeks. They claimed that the passage of the bill was not needed, because women are not overworked in the District of Columbia. They declared it would work a hardship both on the merchants and women, since the merchants would be compelled to close fact, many of them declared that they would substitute men for their woman employes if the bill became a law.
